Title: ARISTA. The Internet of Things (IOT) is inter communication of embedded devices using networking technologies. Our project proposes a remote monitoring of heart rate condition of the patients who live independently in their home while their caretakers are away. The parameters that are used for sensing and monitoring heart rate will send the data through wireless sensors. Adding an android application based observing helps to keep track of the regular health status of a patient. The sensing data will be collected in a database and will be used to inform patient to any unseen problems to undergo possible diagnosis. In case of any emergency, the alert button can be pressed to notify their guardian. Experimental results prove that the proposed system is user friendly, reliable, economical.
